

ON THEIR OWN

Helen, Ben, Justin and Nacho accept a presidential request to go on a secret mission. They fly from Maui to Washington D.C. for a briefing, and continue on to London.

Finding their London contact in dire trouble, they begin to question the purpose of the mission . . . are they being used as a distraction for something bigger? Something more important?

The sleuths decide to split up and strike out on their own, traveling secretly, using inventive modes of transportation. Destination: Egypt. In Cairo they run into some old friends, some gun runners, a couple of jewel thieves, and a murderer - not to mention the camels!

As usual they try to stay out of trouble, but unfortunately their plans to con a thief, steal computer info, and catch a mole, leads them right into the lion's den, or rather the "pharaoh's palace" and, eventually, to his funeral procession at a torch-lit tomb in Sakkara.

Being cats, Mambo and Windy stay at home in Lahaina, on their own, with way too much time on their paws. They don't look for trouble, either . . . it just happens.
